

Choice in School Education

Mr John Roskam
(Executive Director, The Menzies Research Centre, ACT)

ABSTRACT

Is choice a right of parents; should government support choice and is there a limit to that support? “What will be the consequences for schools of demands from parents for educational choice? What can we learn from the international experience of choice? What will be the reaction from governments and education authorities to calls for greater choice? What does choice mean for relations between the government and non-government systems?”